Chair Rozen: Good morning everybody. Welcome to the June meeting of the New York State Joint Commission on Public Ethics. Before we get started, I want to thank you all for joining me today. I hope all of you and your families continue to be healthy and safe as the health crisis continues. This meeting is being held using video conferencing technology. The public session is accessible on JCOPE’s website to watch via livestream. Thank you to everyone who assisted with enabling this meeting. For the time being, JCOPE’s physical offices continue to be closed, but we anticipate that the Albany office will open to the public in July to accept filings and other documents. Similarly, we expect that some of the JCOPE operations that were paused for the past few months will resume shortly after the Albany office reopens. Announcements will be made and distributed at the appropriate time. We will continue to evaluate the circumstances of the health crisis to determine whether further accommodations are still needed. Please contact the Commission staff if you need assistance. Although the majority of staff will continue to work from home, they continue to be available to provide ethics and lobbying guidance, aid with public disclosure filings, ethics trainings, and other mandated services. Finally, to conduct this meeting smoothly, I will be monitoring the video and will do my best to recognize anyone who wishes to speak. It is important that only one person speak at a time. In addition,
I ask that when you speak, please identify yourselves, so that we have a clear record. We will need to, as we did at the last public meeting, take votes by roll call to ensure that everyone is counted. Otherwise, please mute your phone when you are not planning to speak. Alright, let’s move on approval of the minutes behind attachment a, any questions or comments? For clarity here Walt, I can only see very few people on my screen so if someone is raising a hand, I can’t see it so you will to let me know.

Walter McClure: Okay I haven’t seen anybody, does anybody have a question or comment?

Chair Rozen: Okay, hearing none, can I have a motion to approve?

Monica Stamm: Commissioner Weissman.

Chair Rozen: Thank you Commissioner. Second?

Monica Stamm: Commissioner Yates.

Chair Rozen: Okay who is taking the roll, is it Martin?

Monica Stamm: Martin are you taking the roll?

Chair Rozen: We can’t hear you if you are speaking.

Walter McClure: Go ahead Martin.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Dering, on the minutes?

Commissioner Dering: Yes approved.

Martin Levine: Commissioner DiPirro, Commissioner DiPirro?
Commissioner DiPirro: Yes, if you can hear me.

Chair Rozen: Yes, everything.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Fisher?

Commissioner Fisher: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Horwitz?

Commissioner Horwitz: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Jacob?

Commissioner Jacob: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Lavine?

Commissioner Lavine: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Weissman?

Commissioner Weissman: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Yates, sorry Judge Yates?

Okay great, and Chair Rozen?

Chair Rozen: Yes.

Martin Levine: Just to be clear, I saw Judge Yate’s vote on the screen.

Judge Yates: Can I offer it now, yes.

Martin Levine: The motion carries.

Chair Rozen: Thank you. Okay, item 3 on the agenda, report from staff.

Monica Stamm: Great so we just wanted to report to the Commission with respect to the candidates FDS filings who are running in the primary today. There are 317 candidates running for open seats in the primary for state legislative office. We have been working with the Legislative Ethics Commission on compliance with the FDS filing requirements. On May 11, we sent 172 confidential fail to file notices, which provide 15 days for the candidate to file. On May 29, we sent Notices of Delinquency to 72 candidates that still had not filed. That list of delinquent candidates was posted on JCOPE’s website as required by law. To date, there are 43 still outstanding. Does anyone have any questions?

Commissioner DiPirro: I do, sorry for my ignorance, but if they win the primary, how does this impact if they fail to file?

Monica Stamm: We will pursue compliance, and enforcement if necessary.

Commissioner DiPirro: Okay, thank you.

Monica Stamm: With respect to the annual report, as we reported at the last meeting, we have been working to finalize a draft of the report. We expect to have that draft to the Commissioners next week. After the Commissioners have had an opportunity to review it, then we would expect to publish it in early in July. Any questions about the annual report?

Chair Rozen: Okay, let’s move on to item four, attachment b, proposed lobbying regulations.

Martin Levine: I will start off, Mr. Chairman. As a reminder, what you have before you is a set of proposed revisions to the Commission’s comprehensive lobbying regulations, as well as the source of funding regulations, and those are at Parts 943 and 938, respectively, in Title 19. The original lobbying regulations were promulgated over a very lengthy process running from 2016 to 2018 and went into effect January 1, 2019. These were the first set of comprehensive lobbying regulations ever adopted by this commission or its predecessors. After a year of experience with the regulations, staff took the opportunity to address some technical cleanup issues, tweak regulated filing practices, and address some substantive policy questions. We posted the proposed revisions on the JCOPE website as an informal proposal and solicited comments from the regulated community. We did receive some very helpful input from some lobbying firms, trade associations, and good government groups. Based on these comments, we have made a number of changes from the draft that you reviewed at the April meeting. Our goal today is to have the Commission vote to start a rulemaking under the State Administrative Procedure Act and have the revisions in place for the lobbying registration period that begins on January 1, 2021. Should the Commission elect to move forward, the proposal will be posted, excuse me, published in the state register, followed by a 60-day notice and comment period. Any substantive revisions that result from that proposal would require an additional 45-day notice and comment period before any enactment can occur. With that, I am going to turn it over to Carol Quinn, Deputy Director of Lobbying Guidance, and she is going to go over the specific proposed changes. I also want to say that we really appreciate the comments that came in from the regulated community and we hope to continue the dialogue with those who have shown interest, so, Carol?

Carol Quinn: Okay, I am making sure, can you hear me?
Chair Rozen: Yes.

Carol Quinn: Okay, so I am going to go through the public comments, kind of by category, focusing on the definition of designated lobbyist, some issues related to lobby days, and also with the coalition provision. I will get into specific changes we are proposing to the draft revisions presented at the last meeting. These changes, these changes are highlighted in yellow, to try to give you some indication of what we changed from last commission meeting to this. Anyway, I will, after each topic I will stop and ask if the Commissioners have any questions. Moving to the first topic, designated lobbyist, that is on page five, 943.3(g), the concerns, we received five comments. In those comments some concerns were raised about volunteers, board members, and ad hoc committee or task force members being considered lobbyists. First, I am going to point out that the new language in the definition was included to clarify that a person can be their own designated lobbyist. Based on the discussion at last meeting, we put back in the “on behalf of a client” language in this draft that you have in front of you. This draft now is very close to how the definition reads with respect to Board Members in the existing regulations.

I’ll point out, we actually never intended to change the position on Board Members, like I said we only wanted to clarify with these revisions, in general that a person can be their own designated lobbyist. So, let me get through a couple more things that relate to designated lobbyists and then I will take some questions. We also have on page 20, the regulations also make clear that mere attendance at a lobby day does not make any person a lobbyist, because that does not constitute direct contact unless they speak to a public official on behalf of an organization or on behalf of their employer. So, to recap that, at lobby days, only those employees or board members, officers, or directors who attend and speak a lobbying message to a public official at a lobby day get disclosed on lobbying filings. It is not enough to just be in the room or at the rally during a lobby day. In order to address concerns about volunteers and members of organizations possibly being considered individual lobbyists, we clarified on page 23, this is in section 943.6(c) as in cat,(5) we clarified that volunteers, and we added the word mere, the volunteers or mere members of an organization would not be listed as an individual lobbyist of a lobbying organization on the organization’s filings. They are not listed based on activity on the lobby day or really any other day. So, the regs, try, we are seeking to make clear that volunteers or mere members of an organization do not meet the definition of an individual lobbyist. They would not be a designated lobbyist. So, this relates back to the definition of course of individual lobbyist which is a person who is an employed, retained or designated. We add the word “mere” again just to clarify that regular members of an organization would not be considered an individual lobbyist. So, the bottom line, by making the revisions to the definition of designated lobbyist, again we were seeking to clarify that individual people, individual persons, can be their own designated lobbyist, and if so, should report lobbying activity if they meet the $5000 threshold. We also make clear again that volunteers or mere members of an organization aren’t individual lobbyists, and board members and employees who attend a lobby day are also not individual lobbyists, unless they speak to the public official at the lobby day. Alright, that is it in a nutshell on designated lobbyists, so I am ready to take any questions that any commissioners have.

Chair Rozen: Any questions?

Monica Stamm: It looks like Commissioner DiPirro has her hand up.

Commissioner DiPirro: So a scenario that this would impact, and I am not quite sure on the variables, for a chamber of commerce or trade association, that does not have a PAC or a registered lobbyist, but they take members to Albany and they do lobby with specific public officials, and the executive director or CEO and committee members who are not registered lobbyists can speak on behalf of the organization.

Carol Quinn: I am sorry, can you repeat that question, you are talking about board members, directors or officers?

Commissioner DiPirro: If you are a chamber of commerce or trade association and you do not have a PAC, political action committee, nor do you have a registered lobbyist on staff or as a consultant, and you as the executive, the paid chief staff member, take members or committee members to Albany and speak to a public official, have meetings in their office, is that still okay?

Carol Quinn: You can take members, if this is a lobby day, or you can take members to an office, if the organization is registered as a lobbyist then any individual person, which would be an employee or again a board member, director or officer, who speaks a lobbying message, who lobbies basically, would be considered a lobbyist.

Commissioner DiPirro: Well, what if they don’t have a registered lobbyist in the organization?

Monica Stamm: In other words, the issue would be whether or not your organization spends more than $5000 engaging in lobbying activity. Based on your scenario, it is not clear that it would meet the $5000 threshold. The question that Deputy Director Quinn is trying to ask is, is this organization registering on its own behalf and I think, Commissioner DiPirro, you are trying to clarify when you would have to, and if you have this type of meeting, would you have to register on your own behalf, and I think it depends on if you are spending more than $5000 on the lobbying activity, and it sounds like travel expense is not part of that analysis, correct, Carol?

Commissioner DiPirro: Thank you.

Carol Quinn: Correct. So, it would really depend on if you have already registered or if you have hit the $5000 threshold.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Fisher has a question.

Commissioner Fisher: I have a question, if I understand what Ms. Quinn said on designated lobbyists, and I took notes as you were speaking Carol, an employed, retained, or designated were the three verbs, I guess. The definition, though, uses different words, selected, appointed, named, or otherwise intended, so I think I understand what selected, appointed, or named mean, but I am not sure what otherwise intended means, and it seems to broaden things out and makes a guessing game as to intentions. Whereas selected, the act of selecting, appointing, or naming is going to be perhaps reflected in the minutes or board action, by resolution. I don’t, I guess, it’s like narrowing the definition down, but it seems that it is otherwise intended it broadens it right back out again. I am saying that as a lay person.
Carol Quinn: Right, so when I referred to employed, designated, or retained, that is the definition of an individual lobbyist, and just taking a step back, when an entity registers as a lobbyist, the entity itself, has anticipated spending, incurring, or expending both compensation and expenses more than $5000 in a year, and so then they register as the entity. And then on that registration, they list individual lobbyists who are people, who actually do the lobbying for the entity. So then the definition of designated lobbyist comes into play because that entity will list any employees that lobby for them, if they have an outside lobbyist, they will list them, so, and then the designated lobbyist could be a board member, officer, or director, so then they get listed as an individual lobbyist on a registration. The individual lobbyist, the individual person, does not actually register themselves, they are just listed on a filing. So then, but getting back really to your point I think, which is more what does otherwise intended to lobby, and I think it is more of a catch all, so it is, we are trying to capture people who lobby on behalf of a client, who do not meet the definition of employed or retained. And using the term selected, appointed, named, or otherwise intended to lobby is just a way of capturing persons or board members, officers or directors who are lobbying, either for themselves, or for the entity that they are a board member, director or officer of. Does that answer your question?
Commissioner Fisher: I guess it does, but I am still feeling a little uneasy about what the word intended does for the definition.

Martin Levine: Judge Yates would like to comment, so why don’t we let him jump in.

Judge Yates: First of all, thank you for making the change. It is better than the language I was complaining about last time and I appreciate that. I still though, in other places, and I can’t put my finger on it, the old regulations used the word, at the behest of, and in terms of Commissioner Fisher’s concern, wouldn’t it be better if instead of saying otherwise intended, to say at the behest of? You’ve already got that language in the existing rules and people will know what that means.

Carol Quinn: I think the words on behalf of, I guess, on behalf of is similar.

Judge Yates: Yes, I appreciate that. I thank you for putting back in on behalf, that was my concern last time. I’m just addressing Commissioner Fisher’s remarks.

Carol Quinn: Yeah, I believe Commissioner that is in the definition of beneficial client, that is where you are remembering about it, it says on whose behalf and at whose request or behest.

Judge Yates: Yeah, so it is an existing term of art that people understand, and I think it would more directly deal with what you are trying to get at and Commissioner Fisher’s concern.

Monica Stamm:  I think the issue would be, you wouldn’t have “on behest of, and on behalf of” for beneficial client we use at the behest language and not behalf, right. You wouldn’t use both in the same definition.

Judge Yates: Well, then I am just saying then what does otherwise intended accomplish.

Martin Levine:  There is no hidden meaning there.

When we added designated lobbyist to the regulations, even initially in 2018, it was because that term had never been defined by this commission or any of its predecessor agencies.

It had simply been a term in the statute and basically unaddressed from there, so we did the best we could using the plain meaning definitions and say what is to designate, and it is to select, to appoint, or otherwise conveyed an intent for this person to do something, they’ve been designated.  So if the commission is concerned that that somehow conveys a quote, designate, on someone that wasn’t intended - you can see where

I am going with this- then we can narrow it, but at the same time, we didn’t want to be restrictive such that, you know, there is a very specific path of events that have to occur for someone to be identified as a lobbyist, and if you don’t follow those specific paths, then it is a way around it. That was simply the use of the term, “or otherwise intended”, and it was meant that there could be another way to convey to someone that they are designated as a lobbyist, and like I said, if the Commission is concerned that it is too broad and carries too much weight then we can consider changes, we can leave it to see what the comments come in on it, we are open to ideas but that is where it came from, there is nothing more than just an attempt to give meaning to an otherwise undefined term.

Commissioner Fisher: What if we replaced intended with designated?

Martin Levine: That would be circular though.

Commissioner Fisher: No, because we have made three specific ways of designating, and then you are saying and otherwise designated, so it isn’t circular because it says here is one, here is two, here is three, and we haven’t thought of four, five or six, but there might be other ways to so designate.

Carol Quinn: What about the word chosen, or otherwise chosen to lobby?

Commissioner Fisher: Yup, that works for me.

Commissioner Yates: I am okay with it.

Martin Levine: When we go forward, if that is what the commission wants, then it should be clear in the motion to vote on that, it is really up to the commission and since nothing is on the table yet, we’ll just kind of keep it tucked away until that time.
Monica Stamm: Just keep in mind, the idea here is that that this will, we are hoping that today we will approve beginning the rulemaking so it will go out for public comment and we expect entities to continue to comment on this definition so that we can make it as clear as possible.

Carol Quinn: Are there any more questions?

Martin Levine: Carol, why don’t you move on to the next topic, unless anybody else has anything.

Chair Rozen: Martin does this take us to attachment c?

Martin Levine: No, not yet sir, Carol is still going through her summary, so Carol why don’t you move on to the next comment.

Chair Rozen: Thank you.

Carol Quinn: Okay, so now I am going to move on to coalitions, we did receive some comments on the coalition provision. Concerns were raised about the following: the impact on paper coalitions, how a coalition, concerns about how a coalition can track each member’s contribution of money or resources, can JCOPE actually require coalitions to disclose its Lobbying Activity, and just an overall general concern that the lobbying regulations will discourage the formation of coalitions. First, I want to point out that it seems like there might be a fundamental misunderstanding of the coalition provision. The regulations do not require coalitions to file as a coalition. They simply require that coalition activity be disclosed somewhere. Again, our regulations, and the whole goal with our regulations is transparency so we are trying to get the coalition activity which does occur to be disclosed somewhere to the public knows who is behind lobbying activity. So, this disclosure could be either done by the coalition itself if they actually choose to file as the coalition, or by the members of the coalition who hit that $5000 threshold and thereby must report their own lobbying activity. We have made a change to address that misunderstanding. At page 53, at section 943.9(h)(i), we added in language, hopefully, to clarify that this is an optional filing mechanism for groups that qualify as a coalition. If the coalition chooses not to use it, they choose not to file as the coalition, that is fine. The only caveat is then then the members of the coalition must disclose their coalition activity on their own filings, as applicable.

I can get into that more in a minute. Another concern raised by commenters were just the burdens being placed on coalitions, and again I am just going to point out that coalitions do not have to file as the coalition, the regs don’t require that, so they don’t actually have to try to track their members’ contributions, whether it be money or resources. Instead the member can disclose that lobbying activity on their own filings if the coalition opts not to file as the coalition. The paper coalitions may not even hit the threshold, the $5000 threshold as the coalition triggering reporting, but if they do, then the coalition again can choose whether it wants to file and disclose that activity as a coalition or whether it does not want to. So, for any members of a non-filing coalition, whether it is a paper coalition or a regular coalition, any members that actually spend over $5000 in comp and expenses must disclose all their lobbying activity anyway, regardless of how much or how little each activity being reported costs. This would include, we are just clarifying, this would include activities related to coalitions. Another change in the draft was on page 53 again, in (ii), we made, we were hoping to make the definition of coalition a little cleaner. So, we changed some language in there, you can see with the highlights. Coalitions are a group of otherwise unaffiliated entities that come together pooling funds or resources to lobby on a common interest. They are not incorporated, and they haven’t otherwise created a limited liability entity. We are trying to clarify that definition. So, consistent with our overarching goals that I mentioned of transparency, the whole idea behind the coalition provisions really was to promote transparency. The public should know who is behind the billboard that says, “paid for by X coalition”. Again giving an option, we are not telling coalitions they have to file, because that can be cumbersome, they might have a lot of members, it is difficult for them to track, or they just don’t have a responsible party that wants to step up and do the filings for the coalition. We could have had coalitions have to file but we really were sensitive to the fact and we did not want to discourage the formation of coalitions. That is why we provided this optional reporting mechanism for coalitions and that is really what the provisions provide. I guess that is where I will stop and see if you guys have any questions on coalitions in general.

Martin Levine: Looks like Judge Yates has his hand up.

Judge Yates: Just so I am clear then, if somebody, an individual or small group does not spend $5000 but they sign onto a group as a member and then they group itself, in total spends more than $5000, and a majority of the members in that group say yeah, file as a coalition, but the individual who signed onto a letter, or maybe helped draft the letter, doesn’t agree. What’s the status does that person get listed in the coalition filing as a lobbyist, and would that include a 501(c)(3).

Carol Quinn: So, are you asking Commissioner if the coalition decides to file or not whether the members have to agree?

Judge Yates: Yeah, other people in an organization sign a group a letter, and 52 out of those 100 say file as a coalition, and the other 48, say no, don’t I am just a poor person who signed on, and you know and I don’t spend any money
I just agree with your letter or your activity.

Carol Quinn: Well I would say I don’t know if the regulations get involved with whether a coalition decides to file or not. I would think that is within the coalition. I would also, the other thing that might get to your point is so if a coalition does file as a coalition, they will list only those members that meet the threshold as beneficial clients. So, if that member that doesn’t want to be or that doesn’t want the coalition to file, for whatever reason, doesn’t want to be listed on a filing as a beneficial client, remember they are only listed as a beneficial client anyway if they either give the coalition more than $5000, because obviously that would trigger it, as listed as the beneficial client of a filing coalition, or if whatever they give to the coalition plus whatever they do on the side adds up to more than $5000. That is what triggers a member being listed as a beneficial client on a coalition filing, again, when that coalition opts to file as a coalition.

Judge Yates: Again, so I had a two-part question and I think I am clear on one of the two now. So, first of all, individually, each person listed in the coalition would himself or herself or by the group’s or in the group, has spent $5000, otherwise they are not going to be listed as a coalition.

Martin Levine: That is correct.
Carol Quinn: As a beneficial client, correct.

Judge Yates: And then the other part of the question is still fuzzy for me is when you have a disagreement about how to file, there is really no guidance about how the coalition, how the option is determined.

Martin Levine: You are correct. There is no provision in the regs that address how that determination is made, we didn’t want to dictate to a group of entities how they should be governing their own decisions, so if you and the commission thinks that that should be addressed we will be happy to come up with some language, maybe for the next round of revisions, but there is nothing in there now that addresses that one way or the other.

Judge Yates: Yeah, I would really like to hear comments from the affected community on that because there is so many times that there are group letters with 100 signatures and it just seems unwieldy. I don’t know how it would resolve. Instead of suggesting something, I would rather highlight it and hear from the community.

Martin Levine: That works for us too. We will make sure to put that in the group of points where we are really looking for input. Commissioner Dering is looking to speak.

Commissioner Dering: Carol, so if you have the scenario where 10 people got together and each contributed $4999 to a coalition and the coalition spends that on lobbying activity, could you have a scenario then where the coalition doesn’t file a report and then none of the individuals are required to file a report?

Carol Quinn: Well, so to answer that question, first of all, the first trigger is does the coalition spend more than $5000 on lobbying, and if so, then they have to decide whether they want to file or not. They would not have to file as a coalition, and no one has to file a lobbying report unless they spend $5000, so that would be the first thing I would say to that. So I am assuming if each member is giving almost $5000 to the coalition that the coalition is probably hitting that threshold and spending more than $5000, so I would assume that the coalition could file as a coalition and if they didn’t, then, and if they did, if the members are giving just under $5000 or even if they give $5000 as a contribution, they would not be listed as a beneficial client on the coalition filing unless they also spend money on their own, so that is why that questionnaire comes into play, so a coalition could send out that questionnaire that asks each member what their other lobbying activity is. For example, if you give under the threshold to the coalition but you are also spending, you might be a registered lobbyist or a client already, obviously you are already spending $5000 if that is the case, or you might have spent, I don’t know maybe $2000 or something like that, on your own, doing your own lobbying as an entity, that would get combined and could put you over the threshold and get you listed as a beneficial client on that coalition’s filing.

Martin Levine: I am going to jump in here, Carol. Commissioner Dering, we considered this question during the initial promulgation of the regulations, I remember having a dialogue with Commissioner Jacob about this because originally the draft, you know back in 2016, whenever it was originally drafted, said, any members who provide funds or services are considered beneficial clients of the coalition. And during the regulatory process we came to the agreement that if a group wasn’t going to otherwise have to file, this shouldn’t draw them in. So, if you do spend less than $5000 truly, in total, on everything you do, coalition or otherwise, then the regulations do not now bring you in if the coalition files. It is a legitimate policy discussion either way, but that is why we came to that answer, and you’re right, you do present the scenario that could occur, but in the interest of ensuring disclosure without overreaching beyond what the law requires initially, without a coalition, even as an individual, that is where we ended up.

Commissioner Dering: Okay, I am just trying to grab an understanding, so say for argument’s sake, a coalition spends $50,000, all of the contributions from individuals are below $5000, is there anything that would have to be filed by the coalition?
Martin Levine: Potentially no.

Commissioner Dering: Okay.

Martin Levine: As Carol points out, you are in this scenario, you’ve got a coalition that is made up of these groups that each contribute under the threshold but in total you have a large amount of spending. The coalition filing option is precisely that, it is an option. So if the election is to not do that, and everyone is under the threshold, that is where you will end up, but again the idea was that if you were not otherwise required to file as an individual we weren’t going to force the coalition into action. One thing I wanted to bring to the Commission’s attention and the regulated community is, as you can see we have had a very complicated discussion now over some small changes, we had a very complicated discussion when drafting these, and as we go along our goal has always been to simplify and clarify and provide an optional mechanism, but if it is the opinion of the commission, if it is the opinion of the regulated community that this doesn’t work, or that it is too complicated or it doesn’t lead to transparency, or it discourages formation of coalitions this is, we want better regulation, whatever it takes, so we considered proposing a version without any coalition provisions whatsoever but we thought what was in there could be improved, so we proposed these provisions, but you know, sort of everything is on the table. Carol, do you want to go onto the last set of changes?
Carol Quinn: That was really it, the rest of the changes are more of a technical nature. We did reach out to some of the commenters to discuss their comments on the phone. To the extent we could addressed some of those concerns in the draft in front of you, but that was all I was planning on presenting to the commission unless we have questions on other topics, and I’d be happy to answer those.

Martin Levine: I don’t see any more hands, I am sorry, Commissioner Fisher.

Commissioner Fisher: I just want to ask a very general question, so there was a comment in one letter, the one from Zimmerman I guess, the draft regulations impose financial hurdles, yada yada, strongly encourage the commission to carefully evaluate the relative cost of compliance. And it goes to what you were saying too, if we want more transparency we need to make it easier, not harder. We need to make it less expensive, not more expensive. So, does staff feel like we are at least neutral in terms of cost of complying, or have we actually made it a little easier, or have we made it more expensive and more difficult?

Martin Levine: I wouldn’t be able to say either way. What I will say is, you had a statute that was originally drafted in 1977 and amended three or four times over the last forty years, and never at any point had a body said, let’s answer all the questions, and so when you set about doing that and you take forty years of advisory opinions that were on the books and did govern the filing practices under the Lobbying Act, putting them in one place and then answering all of the open questions that we felt we could answer at the time, certainly is going to increase complexity, I am not going to say it doesn’t, simply because we answered questions that hadn’t been answered before.
Like every rulemaking, there is the balance of whether there is a cost or a benefit to impose the regulation, we felt initially, and we continue to feel, that we are doing the best we can to balance those two things, the cost of compliance with the benefit of additional transparency and the benefit of questions answered where they weren’t otherwise. But today, we are looking to start a SAPA rulemaking, and at any point in the future we view this as a fluid dynamic body of rules that will, not to be too esoteric, but will evolve, and they will ebb from the complex to the simplified to attempt to keep that balance in place. And so, are they more complicated than they were before the regs, yes, but I think it gets balanced out by the benefit to the public and the answers to the unanswered questions.

Commissioner Fisher: And the other potential benefit to consider is staff reduction in complexity. If it easier for the staff to do its job because we have clarified things, then that could reduce our costs.
Martin Levine: I would hope so. What I will say is when we drafted these, we were in the process of writing a whole new electronic filing system. So we were able to take the changes that were proposed in the original regulations and incorporate those into the filing system such that there are now features available that weren’t before, and there are now ways to file certain things electronically where there weren’t before, which reduces the staff burden. But like anything, there is going to be a curve where everybody has to get up to speed which we have done over the last year before it becomes less work. Sort of your inverse J-curve.

Commissioner Jacob: May I ask, this is Commissioner Jacob, under what circumstances would a coalition be required to file and under what circumstances would it be an optional?

Carol Quinn: It is never required.

Commissioner Jacob: Never required?

Martin Levine: Correct.

Carol Quinn: If they meet the definition of a coalition.

Commissioner Jacob: Right, is that so even if the coalition were a separate entity, legal entity, and it spent more than $5000 as a coalition, would it be required to file?

Martin Levine: Yes, sir, that is one of the changes we put in place was that when, in this draft that you have before you, when and if it does form, whether it is a legal corporation, or a limited liability entity, that takes it out of the coalition world and it is now its own entity that has standard filing requirements like any other organization. So, it no longer has that option, because it is required to file on its own if it meets the threshold.

Marvin Jacob: I supposed that takes me back to that old question I have that a coalition could conceivable consist of many people who donate, as Commissioner Dering said, right up to the limit of $5000, and then the coalition lobbies and is not required to file and, so we haven’t addressed that, actually, except to say that it is optional, they can if they wish, if they do not incorporate, or do not become a legal entity.

Martin Levine: Yeah, as you will recall, Commissioner, you and I had a fairly spirited discussion about this this first time around, and my position had been a little more expansive, and as you and I discussed, this was a potential outcome, but we agreed that in the interest of not imposing a burden where there wouldn’t be one absent the regulations, that this was the balance to strike, but you are right that this still exists but, as in every policy decision, there are causes and effects.

Commissioner Jacob: Thank you.
Martin Levine: I don’t see any more hands, so staff would request a motion to begin a SAPA rulemaking, if that is the Commission’s decision, and I will also remind the Commission that Commissioner Fisher had proposed a change to the language in designated lobbyist, which could potentially be incorporated into any motion.

Chair Rozen: Can I have a motion please?

Monica Stamm: Commissioner McCarthy.

All in favor? Martin we need a vote please.

Commissioner Fisher: I am going to introduce a motion to amend the definition of designated lobbyist to replace the word “intended” with the word “chosen”.

Martin Levine: Commissioner McCarthy, would you accept that as a friendly amendment?

Commissioner McCarthy: Yes, I would accept it.

Martin Levine: And Commissioner DiPirro, seconded as amended?

Commissioner DiPirro: Yes.

Martin Levine: Thank you. Okay I will call the roll on the motion to commence the SAPA rulemaking with regs as proposed to you with the amendment Commissioner Fisher identified. Commissioner Dering?

Commissioner Dering: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner DiPirro?
Commissioner DiPirro: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Fisher?

Commissioner Fisher: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Horwitz?

Monica Stamm: That’s a yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Jacob?

Commissioner Jacob: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Lavine?

Commissioner Lavine: Yes.

Martin Levine: Judge McCarthy?

Judge McCarthy: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Weissman?

Commissioner Weissman: Yes.

Martin Levine: Judge Yates?

Judge Yates: Yes.

Martin Levine: Chair Rozen?

Chair Rozen: Yes.

Martin Levine: Motion passes.

Chair Rozen: Thank you, alright, let’s move on.

Martin Levine: Oh, I’m sorry, I apologize, the source of funding regulations you have seen before there are no changes since the last meeting but there are changes from the original rulemaking. We do need a motion to send those out for SAPA as well. We would need that as well. I apologize for not bringing that up earlier.
Chair Rozen: No worries, can I have a motion please?

Commissioner Dering: I’ll move.

Chair Rozen: Thank you. Second?

Martin Levine: Commissioner Weissman.

Chair Rozen: Thank you.

Martin Levine: On the source of funding regulations,

Commissioner Dering?

Commissioner Dering: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner DiPirro?

Commissioner DiPirro: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Fisher?

Commissioner Fisher: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Horwitz?

Commissioner Horwitz: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Jacob?

Commissioner Jacob: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Lavine?

Commissioner Lavine: Yes.

Martin Levine: Judge McCarthy?

Judge McCarthy: Yes.

Martin Levine: Thank you. Commissioner Weissman?

Commissioner Weissman: Yes.

Martin Levine: Judge Yates?

Judge Yates: Yes.

Martin Levine: Chair Rozen?
Chair Rozen: Yes.

Martin Levine: Thank you very much. The last thing, I will move very quickly, is if there is are any ideas from the regulated community about the use of stock or equity as lobbying compensation, staff is interested in hearing input on that issue, and they can reach out to any of us offline. Thank you.

Chair Rozen: Alright, does this take us to item five on our agenda?

Monica Stamm: Yes.

Chair Rozen: The committee convened earlier this month, the confidentiality committee convened earlier this month, to consider the staff’s extensive analysis of the legal issues relating to the Commission’s ability to release more information about its operations and investigations. The committee needs to continue its comprehensive review of the materials prepared by staff. The committee plans to reconvene in July and hopes to be able to present to the full Commission at the next meeting a detailed plan, including specific proposals to amend the Commission’s records access regulations, meeting guidelines, and internal practices, so it can, among other things, provide more information to the public and improve communication with complainants, witnesses, and subjects of investigations. At this time, we are concluded with the public session of the June JCOPE meeting. Can I have a motion?
Commissioner Lavine: Mr. Chairman, may I interrupt?

Chair Rozen: Sure Gary, go ahead.

Commissioner Lavine: I have a question for staff. Could you indicate to us, without going into any particularities, which would be confidential, the number of sworn complaints that have been received, and upon which no action has been taken by the Commission?

Monica Stamm: Commissioner Lavine, are you talking about over the history of the commission, or is there a period of time?

Commissioner Lavine: Since the decisions in Trump and Cox.

Monica Stamm: I don’t have a number for you at this moment in time. We can report back at a future meeting.

Commissioner Lavine: Are there any?

Monica Stamm: We changed the definition of sworn complaints, and what we determined to include in that, after the Cox litigation, and so, again I would have to look back in time, to see if before the Cox decision, and before we made that change, if there were some that we did not take action on, based on the current definition.

Commissioner Lavine: On the follow on, Mr. Chairman, if I may, may we assume that there were at least several sworn complaints about which the Commission has taken no action?
Monica Stamm: Commissioner, I would not say that that is an accurate characterization. Again, for many years, this Commission deemed a sworn complaint to be based on first-hand knowledge, so any complaints that alleged violations of Public Officer’s Law that were based on first-hand knowledge were acted on by the Commission. After the more recent litigation and decision, we dropped the requirement that it be based on first-hand knowledge and the Commission had been acting on all notarized complaint that allege violations of the Public Officer’s Law. So, I think it would be inaccurate to say there are several, but again I would need to go back, and we would have to look at that.

Commissioner Lavine: Yes, well again on the follow on, Mr. Chairman, on the premise that there are one or more extant in which the complainant made a sworn statement to the Commission, is it the position of staff and us, as the Commission, to comply with the protocol enunciated in Trump and Cox?

Monica Stamm: I’m sorry, I did not understand that question, if it was directed to me.

Commissioner Lavine: Well, let me reiterate if I may, on the premise that there is at least one extant complaint that was sworn by the complainant that has been presented to the Commission, in addressing that sworn complaint, does staff and the Commission comply with the protocols annunciated in Trump and Cox?

Monica Stamm: I’m not sure what the protocol specifically you are referring to. As I mentioned, we have revisited how we interrupt sworn complaints, and we have been complying with the statute with respect to how we handle sworn complaints. I don’t believe either of the litigation cases that you have talked about set up any other, or any protocol, for the Commission to follow, other than with respect to the specific facts of those cases, where we were ordered to take specific action, which the Commission complied with in each instance.

Commissioner Lavine: Well, then if you wouldn’t mind taking 30 seconds to synopsize what the requirement was in Trump and what the requirement was in Cox in responding to the complaint?

Monica Stamm: I don’t have the specific orders and decisions in front of me, but in each instance, the Commission was ordered something along the lines of, to, if it had not already done so, to take a vote on the specific complaint and to notify the court that the Commission had done so.

Commissioner Lavine: Well, let’s parse through this and take the aspect with respect to taking the vote. Is it the position of staff, that if a sworn complaint is pending, that the Commission is not, under the rubric of either Cox or Trump, which is to say that the commission has to take a vote within a specified period of time?

Monica Stamm: Again, both of those decisions were at different points of time before the Commission, so I am not really following what your line of questioning is, but the commission follows the statute and if it receives a sworn complaint alleging violations of the Public Officers Law, it votes on whether or not to commence an investigation within 60 days of receipt of that complaint.

Commissioner Lavine: Again, on the follow on, Mr.
Chairman, if a complaint, a sworn complaint, has been filed with the Commission and no action has been taken within 60 days, is it the interpretation of staff that the complainant is not entitled to be informed of that fact?

Monica Stamm: I’m sorry, if the Commission receives what it considers to be a sworn complaint alleging a violation of the Public Officers Law and the Commission votes not to commence, you are asking, under the statute, is the Commission required to notify the complainant of what the Commission did?

Commissioner Lavine: Yes, that is my first question.

Monica Stamm: The answer is that under the statute the Commission is not required to notify the complainant of how we voted, or that it voted, under the language of the statute.
Commissioner Lavine:  Well, now may I ask you to address the alternative. I didn’t mean to interrupt you, go ahead.

Monica Stamm:  I was going to say that the Commission can, in certain circumstances, authorize communications under the statute, but as you know, and as the chair mentioned a few moments ago, there is a committee of commissioners that are evaluating all of these issues, looking at the law, and is going to make recommendations relating to the record access regulations and internal policies about communications with complainants, witnesses, subjects, and determine if it wants to disclose more information than is required under the statute, but within the ambit of maintaining the confidentiality of its investigations. So, this is a current topic pending before the committee that is handling record access issues.

Commissioner Lavine:  Well, I appreciate everyone’s indulgence. Let me ask on the follow up further. Are there any complaints, sworn or otherwise, that are before the Commission in which no action has been taken by the Commission within 60 days?

Monica Stamm:  I’m sorry, Commissioner, unless you change how you phrased the question, and there was a subtlety that I missed, I thought I said I would get back to you on that, because again, we sort of changed our procedures in light of litigation, and I would have to go back through the Commission's records.

Commissioner Lavine: Alright, please do that. Let me ask the question, on the hypothetical circumstance that there was a sworn complaint presented to the Commission and the Commission did not take action of any sort within 60 days, what is the obligation of the Commission at that juncture, per Cox and Trump holdings?

Monica Stamm: I'm sorry, if the Commission did not take any action within 60 days?

Commissioner Lavine: Yes.

Monica Stamm: I don't think that the Cox or Trump litigation is the issue here, it is what the statute says, and again, it's how the Commission has interpreted sworn complaints, but it is required to vote within 60 days if it receives a sworn complaint alleging violations of the Public Officers Law against people for whom it has jurisdiction.

Commissioner Lavine: Right, but in the circumstance in which the Commission does not take a vote within 60 days on a complaint filed subsequent to Trump and Cox, is it the staff's position that Trump and Cox apply or do not apply?

Monica Stamm: Commissioner, I am really, I am not going to opine on what those cases dictate to a future set of hypothetical facts that I am telling you don’t happen because we read the statute and comply with the statute. So to the extent that that happens, we will deal with that as a Commission and how to proceed, and there may be questions and legal advice that I may have to give under those circumstances.

Commissioner Lavine: I understand, thank you very much. Mr. Chairman, I strongly urge that a report be made by staff specifically indicating all sworn complaints that have been presented since the holding in Cox, in which the circumstances presented in which no action has been taken within 60 days. And also, an indication from staff to us as to why Trump and Cox do not apply in those circumstances in those cases. Thank you.

[Commissioner Cohen was present for this portion of public session]

Chair Rozen: I need a motion to enter into executive session please.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Dering.

Chair Rozen: Thank you. Second?

Martin Levine: Commissioner Fisher.

Chair Rozen: Thank you, Martin, please call the roll.

Martin Levine: A motion to executive session.

Commissioner Dering?

Commissioner Deering: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner DiPirro?

Commissioner DiPirro: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Fisher?
Commissioner Fisher: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Horwitz?

Commissioner Horwitz: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Jacob?

Commissioner Jacob: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Lavine?

Commissioner Lavine: Yes.

Martin Levine: Judge McCarthy?

Judge McCarthy: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Weissman?

Commissioner Weissman: Yes.

Martin Levine: Judge Yates?

Judge Yates: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Cohen?

Commissioner Cohen: Yes.

Martin Levine: Chair Rozen?

Chair Rozen: Yes.

Martin Levine: Motion passes. Thank you.

Chair Rozen: Okay, the public session is adjourned.

[Chair Rozen and Commissioner McCarthy were not present for this portion of Public Session]

Walter McClure: We’re back in public session.

Commissioner Dering: Monica, can you please report on executive session?
Monica Stamm: Sure. We discussed litigation matters, we considered a request for an advisory opinion on an ethics matter, we granted an extension of an exemption from post-employment restrictions pursuant to Public Officers Law 73(8-b), we commenced one substantial basis investigation, we authorized steps in several investigative matters, closed a matter, and discussed several other investigative matters.

Commissioner Dering: Thank you, is there a motion to close the meeting?

Martin Levine: Commissioner Weissman.

Commissioner Dering: Is there a second?

Commissioner Yates: Yes.

Martin Levine: Thank you, on the motion, Commissioner Cohen?

Commissioner Cohen: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Dering?

Commissioner Dering: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner DiPirro?

Commissioner DiPirro: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Fisher?

Commissioner Fisher: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Horwitz?

Commissioner Horwitz: Yes.

Martin Levine: Commissioner Jacob?

Commissioner Jacob: Yes.
Commission Meeting 6/23/2020

1  Martin Levine: Commissioner Lavine?
2  Commissioner Lavine: Yes.
3  Martin Levine: Commissioner Weissman?
4  Commissioner Weissman: Yes.
5  Martin Levine: Judge Yates?
6  Judge Yates: Yes.
7  Monica Stamm: That’s it. Carries.
8  Martin Levine: Motion carries.
9  Monica Stamm: Thank you.
10 Commissioner Dering: Great. Take care.
